Confusion

1 Underline the words that are related to confusion.

- chaos
- silence
- order
- disorder
- messiness
- serenity
- commotion
- muddle

* Now write some more words that you associate with confusion.

____________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________

2 Which things in the picture on pages 44 to 45 of the EMOTIONARY create a feeling of confusion? Write them below.

____________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________
Read the text on page 44 of the Emotionary and correct the sentences.

- Confusion is a sequence of organised emotions.

- Confusion is a mix of feelings you immediately know how to interpret.

- Someone who is confused knows exactly what is happening.

Read the definitions and find four words in the word search which appear in the text on page 44 of the Emotionary.

1. To make someone lose the ability to move or think properly.

2. When something happens out of the blue, it is ________.

3. The opposite of ‘tidy’.

4. A combination of different elements.

5. A feeling of respect and approval.
New Emotions

Have you ever experienced ‘irritlove’ or ‘irrhappiness’?

We rarely experience ‘irritlove’. It occurs when we love a person but that person does something that makes you feel ‘irrhappy’. For example, they tell the same joke ten times. Or they splash us when they are in the bath and wet our clothes. Does this irritate us? Yes, but it also makes us feel happy. We get angry for a moment, but it passes immediately. And we still love the person, even though we are irritated with them.

Which two new emotions does the text talk about?

What are they a mix of?

Have you ever felt either of them?

Now create your own new feeling. Give it a name and explain what it consists of.
Read what Paul says.

I don’t know what’s wrong with me. I’m confused. My sister, Jasmine, won a poetry competition at school. Everyone is talking about how amazing her poetry is and how clever she is. I should be happy for her but I feel sorry for myself. Why didn’t I win? Of course, I have to admit that my sister is really good with words. No one else in my class has such a clever sister!

What do you think that Paul is feeling?

☐ happiness  ☐ confusion
☐ envy  ☐ fear
☐ pride  ☐ shyness

Do you think that Paul has explained his feelings well? Why? Why not?

____________________________________________________________
____________________________________________________________

The text says that we can experience several feelings simultaneously. Underline two words or expressions that mean the same as simultaneously.

equally  at the same time  with the same strength together  one after the other  in order

Think of four times when you have felt a mixture of feelings simultaneously, and try to analyse them.

1.

2.

3.

4.

Now write down some situations in which you might feel these mixes of emotions.

helplessness + fear =

anger + embarrassment =

loneliness + serenity =
The EMOTIONARY worksheets belong to the Say What You Feel series. For more information on the series, further worksheets and other supplementary materials, please go to www.palabrasaladas.com/f/emo_eng.html